CPU Tech Establishes Sales Partnership with SouthBridge and Genesis

Gains Major East Coast Sales Presence with Established OEM Sales Force

PLEASANTON, Calif. – March 23, 2009 – CPU Technology, Inc. (CPU Tech), a leader in secure processing solutions and compatible modernization, announces today the signing of relationships with SouthBridge and Genesis Associates Manufacturers Representative to sell the Acalis Secure Processor and electronic modernization solutions. SouthBridge is the largest electronics rep firm managing the southeastern U.S. with 27 business representatives averaging over 16 years of experience. Genesis covers the northeastern U.S. with 30 people and has been in business over 20 marketing high technology products in the New England and Mid Atlantic marketplace.

“With six offices across the southeast, SouthBridge brings a premier outsourced technical OEM sales force to help CPU Tech grow its secure processor and compatible modernization business,” said Tony Gann, president of SouthBridge. “We are delighted to bring CPU Tech’s products and services into our portfolio of premier solutions and offer it to our broad range of clients and prospects.”

“With over 1,200 current customer relationships, Genesis will help find opportunities for the Acalis chipsets and other CPU Tech offerings such as modernization,” said Dan Fradkin, President of Genesis. “We are excited about the opportunity to bring this strong technology to our customers who need secure processing and compatible modernization.”

“As a leader in secure processing for the commercial and defense industries, it is essential that we have highly technical and established representation by our sales partners,” said Jim Ball, senior vice president of Sales at CPU Tech. “We are pleased to have Genesis and SouthBridge bring their experience, relationships and drive to help CPU Tech establish a strong presence in the eastern U.S. marketplace.”
